The fund's aims

The fund aims to achieve long-term capital growth by investing principally in the shares of companies listed, quoted or traded in the United States of America.

Fund update

A number of factors combined to make a negative impact on the US market – and particularly on certain sectors – during August. The trade war between the US and China continued to escalate. Weakness in European economies and declining business and consumer confidence in the US also weighed on sentiment.

For now, US consumers are in a strong position. Employment levels are high and growing, incomes are rising and consumers aren't weighed down by too much personal debt. The market, however, has started to wonder when the current weakness in the industrial economy will start to be felt in the consumer economy.

Our portfolio, meanwhile, held up rather better than the wider market. We continued to benefit from our bias towards 'quality' companies enjoying moderate growth in sales. Examples included Booz Allen Hamilton (a government contractor) and Crown Castle (a real estate investment trust). Both holdings contributed to returns on the month.

We benefited when one of our software companies, Carbon Black, was acquired by VMware. It was also nice to see our patience with Lowe's (a retailer of home products) being rewarded. This has traditionally underperformed its larger competitor Home Depot but its new management is in the early stages of effecting a turnaround. Towards the end of last year, it reported a disappointing quarter which caused the market to lose faith in the turnaround story. We recently increased our holding and have been rewarded by much better-than-expected earnings in the most recent quarter.

Shortly after the month end, the Institute of Supply Management (ISM) manufacturing index was released. It came in below 50, thus signifying contraction in the manufacturing economy. The same report also indicated significant weakness in new orders. We believe this is due to the trade war and are not confident of seeing an improvement in the short term. For that reason, we continue to have a bias away from companies that benefit from economic growth and towards those whose prospects are less dependent on wider economic conditions.

Risks and important information

To ensure you understand whether this fund is suitable for you, please read the Key Investor Information Document and Costs and Charges Information document, which are available, along with the fund's Prospectus, from artemisfunds.com.

The value of any investment, and any income from it, can rise and fall with movements in stockmarkets, currencies and interest rates. These can move irrationally and can be affected unpredictably by diverse factors, including political and economic events. This could mean that you won't get back the amount you originally invested.

The fund's past performance should not be considered a guide to future returns.

The fund may have investments concentrated in a limited number of companies, industries or sectors. This can be more risky than holding a wider range of investments.

The fund may invest in the shares of small and medium-sized companies. Shares in smaller companies carry more risk than larger, more established companies because they are often more volatile and, under some circumstances, harder to sell. In addition, information for reliably determining the value of smaller companies – and the risks that owning them entails – can be harder to come by.

The costs and benefits of currency hedging transactions will apply to hedged shares.
