Average Credit Quality	BB-	BB-
Current Yield	5.6	5.9

Any yields quoted on the fact sheet are calculated at portfolio level gross of tax and expenses.

- Current Yield is the annual interest earned on the underlying bonds divided by the market price of the underlying portfolio of bonds. The figure is not the dividend yield received by the investors and is subject to change depending on the underlying portfolio of bonds.
- Yield to Worst is the lowest potential yield that can be received on a bond without the issuer actually defaulting. The yield to worst is calculated by making the worst-case scenario assumptions on the issue.
- Yield to Maturity is a concept used to determine the rate of return an investor will receive if a long-term, interest-bearing investment, such as a bond, is held to its maturity date. Please note that this is not the return or dividend to be received by investors in the fund.

Fund management commentaryMarket Review

Despite the pullback in equities, notably technology stocks, and high levels of new issue activity, high yield spreads were range-bound in early September. However, as the month progressed high yield spreads widened and risk assets sold off, as uncertainty grew with the continued rise of COVID-19 cases in Europe, and concerns over the chances of a second United States stimulus package. The ICE BofAML Global High Yield Index USD-hedged returned -1.00%, with BBs, Bs, and CCCs returning -1.20%, -0.91% and -0.01% respectively. When breaking returns down by local currency, the Great Britain pound outperformed with a -0.21% return, while the euro and U.S. dollar returned -0.61% and -1.14% respectively. The best performing industries were energy, real estate, and financial services. In contrast, the worst performing industries were leisure, capital goods, and basic industry.

Fund Review

Security selection positively impacted returns. Sector allocation outperformed due to an underweight to energy, and an overweight to capital goods. This was somewhat offset due to underweight to banking.

Market Outlook

Our base-case is for spreads to stay range-bound for the time being, with a year-end forecast of 500 for U.S. and global high yield spreads. Our range-bound expectation for spreads is based on ongoing monetary support from central banks and the continued global hunt for yield, offset somewhat by mixed fundamentals. However, we do see a possibility for heightened volatility with several key risks on the horizon. From a bottom-up perspective, we continue to diligently follow our investment process by focusing on buying issuers with improving fundamentals and limited refinancing needs. Security selection remains paramount, as we continue to focus on issuers' exposure to the lasting impacts of the COVID-19 crises and the risk of exposure to a potential second wave. From a ratings perspective, we see the best value in BB and B-rated credits.

We continue to incorporate our dynamic ESG and data science AI initiatives into our fundamental research. These initiatives represent the continual evolution of our high yield investment process. These proprietary tools have allowed us to test our investment biases and have highlighted unique investment opportunities while expanding efficiencies.
