Quarterly fund commentary

During the period, the fund continued to focus on finding pockets of value by investing across capital structures, currencies whilst maintaining a preference for financials over non-financials. Within this, the fund invested in less interest rate sensitive securities. The fourth quarter of the 2013 ended with a new tone in the fixed income markets with the start of the US Federal Reserve's (Fed) tapering program, Ben Bernanke's chairmanship at the Fed drew to a close and the prospect of US interest rate normalisation began. After months of uncertainty on the timing of tapering, US data showing stronger growth predicated higher US interest rates. The UK economy has also shown signs of improvement recently. Meanwhile the European Central Bank (ECB) cut interest rates to promote growth in the region. Corporate bonds outperformed core government bonds, such as bunds, over the quarter. Within corporate bonds, lower rated issuers outperformed higher rated issuers whilst financials continued to outperform non-financials. We believe that the current ECB stance will benefit European Corporate issuers and therefore we currently favour Europe over the US. Core Europe is demonstrating growth but the periphery is still weak though showing signs of recovery.
