Volatility is a statistical measure of the dispersion of returns for a portfolio or market index. In most cases, the higher the volatility, the riskier.

Tracking Error is the standard deviation of the difference between the portfolio return and the desired investment benchmark return.

Sharpe Ratio is a ratio used to measure risk-adjusted performance. It is calculated by subtracting the risk-free rate from the rate of return for a portfolio and dividing the result by the standard deviation of the portfolio returns.

Quarterly comment

The first quarter of 2025 was favorable for US value equities, which avoided steep declines experienced by their growth counterparts and finished the quarter with a positive return. This favorable result occurred despite a meaningful decline during March, driven largely by uncertainty around President Trump’s policy agenda. Against this backdrop of solid benchmark performance, the Fund trailed the MSCI USA Value Index.

According to our analysis, our preference for high quality, attractively valued stocks was a modest headwind to performance. While more reasonably valued stocks outperformed the broader US market, they underperformed within the MSCI USA Value Index, more than offsetting any tailwinds from our high quality approach.

Sector-level contributions to relative performance were modest for the quarter, with Communication Services presenting a headwind to relative returns, driven primarily by the strategy holding of Alphabet. Conversely, Health Care contributed favorably due to stock selection.

Alphabet, a top contributor in the prior quarter, was the top detractor in the first quarter. Despite strong growth across search, social media, and cloud segments, its search business faced increased competition, and the company increased capital expenditures beyond investor expectations. Conversely, Johnson & Johnson benefited from solid results and EPS guidance.

The Fund remains invested in high quality, attractively valued securities.
